

Place of interest in the Lukhanji and Chris Hani area
The Berry Reservoir, provides a serene sanctuary for those wanting to soak up some peace and quiet.

For the casual stroller can take the short Aloe walking trail which starts and ends at the Berry Reservoir, and for the more energetic, the longer two hour hike. Both trails afford the visitor marvellous views of Queenstown and the surrounding Eastern Cape area.

Just 5km outside town on the Dordrecht Road lies the Bongola Dam (derived from the Xhosa word "mbongolo", meaning donkey) - a large expanse of water cradled in a deep basin set in the hills surrounding Queenstown. The Queenstown Bongola Dam acts as Queenstown's main water supply, as well as a popular recreation spot for picnics and water sports such as yachting, power boating, water-skiing and wind surfing. For the angler, the dam is stocked with black bass and bluegill, which provides fisherman with hours of pleasure before they head for the opposite shore to join the locals for 'libations' at the Queenstown Power and Yacht Club premises, also a popular venue for functions.

Visitors to Queenstown will find a number of Eastern Cape Game Reserves in the area around Queenstown, such as the Lawrence de Lange Game Reserve resting on the slopes of Queenstown's Madeira Mountain. This Eastern Cape Game Reserve just outside Queenstown provides guests with the opportunity to see eland, gemsbok, kudu, blesbok, springbok, ostrich, zebra, Indian water buffalo, wildebeest, rhinoceros and giraffe. In winter, this Queenstown Game Reserve is covered in scarlet Aloe Ferox, then in summer, the tamboekie thorn adds colour to the acacia covered in yellow flowers.

With so much to do in Queenstown, you will of course need somewhere to stay. Holiday in privately owned Queenstown Guest Farm Accommodation richly stocked with game, or Queenstown Bed & Breakfast Accommodation situated on a sheep and cattle farm bounded by the majestic Eastern Cape mountains. See the WhereToStay Queenstown Accommodation page for more info on these Eastern Cape accommodation
